HANNAH STILL GRILLED IN HORST CASE

TWO IMPLICATED IN CONFESSION DENY KNOWLEDGE OF CASE

Authorities Believe
Hannah Still Has Not Told All

(BULLETIN)

WOOSTER, O., Feb. 21.—Following another grilling to which Charles Hannah was submitted here today, the confessed slayer of young Melvin Horst gave Wayne County authorities another "confession," absolving Tony La Facia and Charles Tressko, from any participation in the brutal killing of the Orrville boy.

Hannah reiterated his admission of slaying Melvin.

Officials immediately began, with renewed effort, to question the confessed boy-killer regarding what disposition was made of the lad's body.

In his confession today, Hannah declared he did not even know La Facia and Tressko, stating that part of his previous official admission, claiming La Facia and Tressko had planned the murder at Akron, was false.

Hannah told investigators that he alone was responsible for Melvin's death.

WOOSTER, O., Feb. 21.—Although he had signed a lengthy written statement admitting he killed 4-year-old Melvin Horst at Orrville nearly fourteen months ago, Charles Hannah was still being questioned by authorities here today.

The confessed slayer contended he did not know what final disposition was made of the body, and he is being further grilled on the supposition that he did not tell all he knew.

Hannah's confession declared that he turned the body over to Tony La Facia and Charles Tressko. Both men have been taken into custody and are also being grilled.

Only minor charges, so far, have been entered in the case. Junior Hannah, ten-year-old son of Charles Hannah, who told five different versions of the disappearance of young Melvin, has been charged with delinquency. His father, who admitted "framing" the stories his son told, has been charged with contributing to his son's delinquency. Junior was ordered held in the county children's home.

Hannah confessed that he told his father what to say in the event he should be questioned. He told him to place the blame for the killing upon Arthur Arnold, whom Hannah implicated in the arrangements which had been made for the contemplated slaying. In his confession, Hannah declared Arnold arrived at the scene after the boy had been brutally battered over the head.

Officials stated today they were uncertain what action, if any, will be taken against Arthur Arnold, who, with his father, Elias, was convicted on charges of child-stealing in connection with Melvin Horst's disappearance and started serving sentences in penal institutions. They were later granted a new trial and were acquitted. Junior Hannah was the state's star witness at the trials of the Arnolds.

La Facia and Tressko have both denied the accusations which Hannah makes in his confession. La Facia, who is being questioned by Wayne County officials here, admits that he was in Orrville the evening on which Hannah declares Melvin was beaten over the head with a two-by-four, and was placed in a burlap sack, but he denies any knowledge of the murder.

Tressko has not been brought to Wooster. He has been grilled by Akron police and Summit County officials at Akron since his arrest there yesterday afternoon.

Hannah declared in his confession that the plot to "get rid" of Melvin was made because those implicated held a grudge against Roy Horst, Melvin's uncle, who was then marshal of Orrville. Marshal Horst, Hannah said in the confession, had been watching the bootleg activities of the men. They were under the impression that Melvin was a son of Roy Horst.

Mrs. Hannah, the confessed killer's wife, has denied that she knew anything about the murder, and further declared that if her husband was a bootlegger, she knew nothing of it. She asserted she believed Hannah was not telling the truth.

LINCOLN'S SISTER-IN-LAW DIES

Mrs. Emile Todd Helm, Sister Of Mary Todd Lincoln, Dies At Lexington, Ky.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Feb. 21.—Mrs. Emile Todd Helm, 94, the last surviving relative and intimate friend of Abraham Lincoln had been claimed by death today. Mrs. Helm was a sister of the president's wife, Mary Todd Lincoln.

She died at her home near here yesterday following a short illness due to old age. The sister of the former "first lady of the land" lived with the Lincolns at their home at Springfield, Ill., when she was a girl. A friendship which lasted until death was formed between the president and the Kentucky woman.

Mrs. Helm's husband, Brigadier General Ben Hardin Helm, served in the Confederate army during the Civil War, but he had been offered a commission with the Union forces. She lived at the White House for a few months after General Helm was killed in the battle of Chickamauga in 1862.

Mrs. Helm has lived in Fayette County for the past twenty years in an old colonial residence which was built by Colonel Abraham Bowman, the revolutionary soldier. The deceased woman's daughter, Katherine Helm, is the author of "Mary, Wife of Lincoln."

DECLINE IN RETAIL FOOD PRICES SHOWN IN JANUARY REPORT

Prices Drop 1 1-2 Per Cent; Still Higher Than Year Ago

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—Retail food prices are coming down. Returns to the department of labor today indicated there was a decrease of slightly more than 1 1-2 per cent decline in January from December prices. However, there has been an increase of about one-half of one per cent since January a year ago.

The heaviest declines during the month included "strictly" fresh eggs, 12 per cent; butter, 9 per cent; coffee, 5 per cent; navy beans, 3 per cent and lard, 2 per cent.

Of the seventeen food articles that increased in price during the month, cabbage topped the list with a 16 per cent increase over December prices. Oranges increased 8 per cent; leg lamb, 4 per cent; pork chops and potatoes, 3 per cent; hens and onions, 2 per cent. Such articles as rib and chuck roast, plate beef, canned tomatoes and prunes, increased 1 per cent.

The following cities reported a decrease in the average cost of food during January: Bridgeport, 4 per cent; Denver, Louisville, Newark, New Haven, New York, Philadelphia, Portland, Ore., Salt Lake City, Scranton, and Seattle, 3 per cent; Boston, Buffalo, Charleston, S. C., Chicago, Cincinnati, Columbus, Dallas, Fall River, Houston, Indianapolis, New Orleans, Norfolk, Pittsburgh, Providence, Rochester and Savannah, 2 per cent.

A decrease of one per cent was reported by Atlanta, Baltimore, Birmingham, Detroit, Jacksonville, Fla., Kansas City, Little Rock, Los Angeles, Manchester, Memphis, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Mobile, Peoria, Portland, Me., Richmond, St. Louis, St. Paul, San Francisco, Springfield, Ill., and Washington. ### ADMITS KILLING

THREE INDICTED IN BUS TRAGEDY PLEAD NOT GUILTY FRIDAY

Officials Of Line And Driver Appear On Charges

EATON, O., Feb. 21.—Three men, including two officials of the Traffic Man Company, today had entered pleas of not guilty to charges of manslaughter which had been placed against them following the death of two persons in a bus crash near West Alexandria January 2.

The men are Wilbur Spratt, 27, of Indianapolis, Ind., driver of the bus, and O. F. Caesar and L. D. Kohler, both of Cincinnati, president and general manager, respectively, of the company.

The three men were arraigned before Judge A. C. Risinger, here. They were released under bond of $1,500 on each of two charges of manslaughter.

Date of trial was not announced. They are charged with the death of Thomas Carney, of Alexandria, Ind., and Esther Masters, of Connersville, Ind.

MAN IDENTIFIED AS BANDIT FILES SUIT

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 21.—An echo of the famous case of Jimmy Valentine, 21-year-old convicted bandit, who was sentenced to nineteen years' imprisonment in the Ohio State Penitentiary, had been heard today by a damage suit which was filed in the Franklin County pleas court.

The suit was filed by Howard Minic, who was allegedly identified as Valentine, the "leather bag bandit," by Louis L. Alexander, proprietor of a restaurant. Minic asks for $17,000 damages.

Minic charges that Alexander pointed him out as the bandit who held up and robbed his restaurant. Minic was held by police for a time, until it was shown that he was not the notorious "leather bag kid." He was released when Valentine admitted a long series of robberies and hold-ups, and his many victims identified him and failed to recognize Minic.

CURSE OF KING TUT RECALLED BY FATAL LEAP

Baron Westbury, Father Of Explorer, Is Suicide

LONDON, Feb. 21.—The "curse of Tut-Ankh-Amen" was vividly recalled here today with the death of Baron Westbury, who plunged 100 feet from a window of his London apartment to the street.

Baron Westbury's son, the Hon. Richard Bethell, died suddenly of a heart attack last November. Bethell was associated with Howard Carter and Lord Carnarvon in the discovery of the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen in the Valley of Kings near Luxor, Egypt.

Bethell's death was the tenth that had occurred in circles directly connected with the discovery and excavation of the Pharaoh's tomb. A papyrus found in the vault threatened that sudden and unexpected death would be visited upon all concerned in disturbing the ancient Egyptian king's remains.

ODD FELLOWS LOSE TEMPLE TO FLAMES

SANDUSKY, O., Feb. 21.—Fire gutted the Odd Fellow's Temple here today causing damages estimated at more than $50,000.

The temple is sandwiched between two hotels. Guests of the two hotels, however, slept peacefully unaware of the blaze while firemen battled for two hours in extinguishing the flames.

A considerable portion of the damage to the temple was done by smoke and water. Lodge and club rooms, a dance hall on the third floor; and offices and business establishments in the building were badly wrecked.

An investigation has been started to determine the cause of the blaze.

POLICE ARREST 790 IN LAST 24 HOURS

CHICAGO, Feb. 21.—Police continued their raids against hoodlums here today and revealed that with the last twenty-four hours, 790 men were seized in raids.

Only one was found to be carrying a revolver, indicating, Chief of Police Russell believes, that the criminals are beginning to fear the police drive. Fifty-three of those taken were found to have criminal records.

STUDY OF TAXATION STATE DUTY EXPERT TELLS CONVENTION

Attacks Method Of Study
Now Being Made
In Ohio

CLEVELAND, Feb. 21.—The state of Ohio and not private interests should finance the study of taxation now under way, Prof. H. Lutz of Princeton University and well-known taxation authority, declared at the convention of the Ohio Association of building owners and managers, which closes its sessions here today.

Prof. Lutz referred directly to the study now being made by a committee appointed by Gov. Myers Y. Cooper to recommend a taxation program to be submitted to the next session of legislature. No funds have been appropriated by the legislature for the work of the committee and it has been the belief that so-called private interests will donate the necessary money.

"Any suggestions for a taxation program that comes from a group financed by any private or selfish interests are going to be tainted," Prof. Lutz warned.

Speaking of Ohio's taxation situation, Prof. Lutz charged that the state has been negligent in its support of the state taxation commission. He recommended that the legislature should reorganize the commission and give it continuous authority to carry on taxation research.

The generally accepted doctrine of home rule in Ohio seriously impedes the just distribution of taxes raised in this state, Prof. Lutz declared. Ohio, he asserted, should follow the model plan of state and local taxation adopted by the National Tax Association in remedying its taxation scheme.

KILLED BY STREET CAR IN CLEVELAND

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 21.—Hurled under the wheels of a street car when he stepped into the side of a trailer, Harry P. Klein, 56, of East Cleveland, was almost instantly killed here today, according to police.

The body of the man was horribly mangled by the accident. Both of his legs were severed and it was necessary to jack up the car trucks in order to extricate him from beneath the trailer.

Witnesses said Klein stepped from behind an east bound trolley into the side of a trailer on a west bound street car.

MARKET IRREGULAR

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—While sharp rallies took place at the opening of the market today in a number of the stocks which were under pressure at yesterday's close, the market as a whole was irregular, with narrow price changes.

Acquires Two Pretty Wives Before Arrest Results

CHICAGO, Feb. 21.—From behind the bars of a detective bureau cell, George Howell, dapper young life guard, today tried to explain how he acquired two wives, both beautiful heiresses, at the same time.

Howell was arrested last night with his second wife, Miss Margery Heisenbottle, daughter of Fred Heisenbottle, wealthy New York tobacco merchant, when the girl's mother found the couple after a two-day search.

Margery's mother is now the wife of Max Strauss, member of the New York Stock Exchange.

The warrant for Howell's arrest was obtained by Alexander Kahnweiler, wealthy father of his first bride, Miss Artella Kahnweiler whom Howell married in 1928.

Howell met the New York girl in California last fall and they were secretly married, the girl explained. Mrs. Strauss invited Howell to journey east with herself and daughter. But when the mother learned of the wedding and threatened to separate the two, the young couple fled the train at Chicago. Mrs. Strauss remained here until she located the pair.

Two minutes before the Century Limited left Miss Heisenbottle ran from the train and joined young Howell in the train shed. Together they scampered to a waiting taxi, with Mrs. Strauss in laborious pursuit, a suitcase in either hand.

The cab whisked away before she could catch the pair. Mrs. Strauss then went to police headquarters and signed a complaint charging the former life guard with kidnapping.

"Sandy never told me he was married," the New York heiress tearfully informed her mother as they went to a downtown hotel. "Now that I know the sort he is, I'll never see him again."

From his cell Howell this morning issued notes to the girl, pleading his love and promising to have his marriage to Miss Kahnweiler annulled.

Reporters to whom the notes were entrusted were denied admittance by Mrs. Strauss, who said she and her daughter were "all broken up over this dreadful thing."

PROBING AIRPLANE RUM RUNNING PLOT

FREMONT, O., Feb. 21.—Climaxing the revelation that this section has been one of the terminals of an airplane rum-running gang, federal authorities today opened an extensive investigation into trans-lake air "booze" trade.

Sheriff Cal Shue uncovered the airplane smuggling conspiracy last Monday when he caught six alleged rum-runners in the act of transferring liquor from a monoplane to automobiles on the ice of Sandusky Bay. Two of the alleged runners were arrested. They are Owen Kane, 35, Lakewood, O., and Lonnie Reinhart, 36, Port Clinton, O.

VETERAN DIES

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 21.—Death today claimed Daniel Edwards, 88, Civil War veteran and former prominent figure in Ohio politics. Edwards died at his home here last night.

Edwards held many public offices in Franklin County and was prominent in the early civic life of Columbus. Funeral services will be held tomorrow.

ACTRESS IS SUED

CLEVELAND, Feb. 21.—Tongues of gossip were wagging here today over the news that Claire Eames, Cleveland society girl and actress of the London and New York stage has been sued for divorce in California by Sidney Cox Howard, the playwright to whom she was married in 1922.

The divorce petition, according to reports here, charges Mrs. Eames with desertion.

NOTE OF PESSIMISM OVER ARMS MEETING NOTED AT CAPITAL

Leaders Fear Meet May Be Criticised In Congress

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—A distinct note of pessimism over the prospective accomplishments of the London naval conference has developed in Washington this week. It has grown to such proportions that administration leaders were somewhat worried today over the possibilities that the situation may be given a critical airing in congress, which would be embarrassing for the administration as well as for the American delegates.

The enforced recess of the conference, due to the French ministerial upset, the now practical certainty that the conference cannot accomplish any material naval reduction, and the persistent demand of the French for a treaty of security, have combined to make congress exceedingly pessimistic concerning the whole project at London.

It is because of fear of "stirring things up" on Capitol Hill that the administration will refrain at this time from asking congress for additional appropriations for the American delegation, notwithstanding the fact that the initial appropriation of $200,000 is about exhausted, and the delegation is about "hooked."

Notwithstanding efforts of administration leaders to soft-pedal public discussion of the developments at London, various members of congress have begun to air opinions about them. Thus far they have been confined to off-the-floor utterances, but if the subject is introduced into general debate, particularly senate debate, the outlook is one which administration leaders view with some trepidation.

GIRL CAUSES RIOT IN CAFETERIA

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—A girl leaped on a table in a crowded cafeteria, threw back her head and at the top of her voice, screamed: "Everybody out. This place is on strike!"

As a result of a near riot followed scores of patrons walked out without paying their checks and damage today was estimated at $5,000.

The girl, Anna Speaker, 18, and three men were arrested. Police said damage to the place was done by the Amalgamated Food Workers' Union, a Communist organization.

RABBIS JAILED ON CHARGES OF REVOLT

MOSCOW, Feb. 21.—Charged with counter-revolutionary activities, three leading rabbis and twelve synagogue leaders have been lodged in jail by the Soviet authorities at Minsk. It was learned here today.

Reports that some or all of those arrested had been shot were vigorously denied by the semi-official newspaper Izvestia today.

The arrested leaders are charged with maintaining connections with counter-revolutionary elements outside of Russia.

FACES FATE CALMLY FOR BRUTAL MURDER OF AGED EMPLOYER

Mrs. Eva Duggan Is First Woman Hung In Arizona

FLORENCE, Ariz., Feb. 21.—Eva Duggan went to her death early today an example of supreme calmness, in the face of the fate decreed by society for a brutal murder of a helpless old man invalid.

The strapping housekeeper who killed her rancher employer, A. J. Mathis at his Tucson ranch three years ago, died "like a man" on the gallows, the first woman of whom Arizona has ever exacted the supreme penalty. She died instantly as the noose tore her head from her body.

Mrs. Duggan's iron nerve supported her during her last night on earth, lending a grim calm to her rugged features.

That she could have cheated the form of death the law decreed, was demonstrated when she turned over to her guards early this morning a safety razor blade and a bottle presumed to contain poison.

Two women were with Mrs. Duggan in the death cell. Addressing them, the condemned woman asked:

"Well, what do you think about it? Would you wait for the rope?"

Thereupon Mrs. Duggan delivered the bottle and the razor blade.

Mrs. Duggan was a "wage slave" who appeared to the city newspapers who called at her door to be standing up very well.

As she started the walk to the execution chamber, supported by a guard walking on either side, Mrs. Duggan's smile was a little wry, but she did not falter.

During the solemn march, the woman recited a bit of doggerel: "We come to this world an naked and bare."

"Where we are going, the Lord only knows where. If we are good fellows here, we'll be good fellows there."

A hundred persons, including four Florence women, went into the gates, some of them destined to witness the most horrible execution in the history of Arizona hangings.

A scene of horror, sickening to the most hardened officers, was hurried upon the tiny steel-walled death chamber when the condemned woman dropped toward the gallows, the weight of her body literally tore her head from her shoulders.

It was gruesomely unnecessary for Dr. C. L. Long, prison physician to step to the gallows and apply his stethoscope, an act that is so often reported as part of the dramatic last act in the career of a murderer.

Among numerous telegrams and letters received by Mrs. Duggan at the condemned cell, was a telegram from her daughter, Mrs. Cecil Lovelace, New York musician.

The telegram, dated at South Bend, Ind., said:

"My dear mother, be brave. God is with you. All my love, I will pray for you."

At the moment that Warden Lorenzo Wright adjusted the black cap, he said:

"Eva, you have been brave. Is there anything you wish to say?"

Mrs. Duggan shook her head, mutely.

She was strapped with four straps. It had been planned to strap her with a pine plank at her back in case her knees gave way.

That was found unnecessary. Mrs. Duggan's body will be buried in the small prison plot behind the grim gray concrete walls.

She will have a better coffin than those provided by the state of Arizona for hanged murderers, for by her sale of bead-work, and by collecting fifty cents apiece from each of her visitors in the condemned cell, Mrs. Duggan raised the money to purchase a more elaborate casket.

Mrs. Duggan left instructions to send her trunk and her few small personal belongings to a cousin at Weston, Mo.

ROAD SUPERVISOR SECRETLY INDICTED

BUCCYRUS, O., Feb. 21.—Charged on seventeen counts with padding the payrolls of the state highway department, J. C. Reiff, former road supervisor, had been secretly indicted by the Crawford County grand jury here today.

He will be arraigned Wednesday.

The irregularities with which Reiff is charged were discovered by State Examiner J. S. Martin, who made a special examination of road maintenance payrolls here several weeks ago.

Martin charged Reiff with padding six payrolls and eleven checks, for a total of $374.

READ THIS FIRST:

Herbert Maxwell, guardian of Patricia and Jimmy Blair, twins and heirs to a huge estate, makes away with half of their fortune. He holds Jimmy, an aphasia victim, captive. Nurse Margery, Lynne, Lieutenant Rex Dallard, Dr. Gordon, both in love with Pat, attempt to frustrate the plot, but fail. Then Jimmy is discovered, under care in a sanitarium, where he has been placed by Maxwell. He is returned to his sister and Dallard and Gordon, who have been conducting a separate hunt, are notified.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXI

Rex Dallard was visibly affected by the change he instantly noted in the physical appearance of the young man to whom he owed so much. Jimmy was thirty pounds lighter than on the morning he had carried the half paralyzed lieutenant almost a mile across No. Man's Land.

Margery, too, had suffered a shock at her first sight that morning of the young man she had last seen lying on the sidewalk just before a blackjack had sent her into oblivion.

Pat, evidently, had noted Jimmy's shrunken limbs and thin wrists with the eye of apprehension, for she started questioning the doctor about him the moment Margery's introduction of her "one other girl friend" to the two men was over.

"That dog of a Maxwell must have been starving him!" she declared, with indignation. "Margery says he's much thinner than he was that day she tried to get him away from the brute that black-jacked her! Or do you think, Frank, that it's the shell shock disorder that has so pulled him down?"

"That, very likely, is the cause," replied the doctor. "It is the frequent result in shell shock cases, as I've been informed, for the victim to fall away in flesh. I met a doctor today at one of the institutions Rex and I visited in our hunt for Jimmy out in Mt. Vernon, who told me of a case he is taking care of at the government hospital here on Long Island. The case, I gathered, is almost identical with Jimmy's. And this man's name, too, is Jim. The last name is Elwell. He hails from Indiana, and was hurt at Sedan, the last battle of the war. His mother and father came on from their home in Indiana to be with their boy while the specialists are trying to decide whether an operation is advisable or not!"

"Dr. Pine told me today," said Pat, "that I ought to have Jimmy examined by specialists in brain disorders. You think, don't you, Frank?" she went on quickly, "that an operation is about the only means of restoring him to normal?"

"I haven't said anything that I can recall," he replied guardedly, "that might give you reason to believe I favor an operation. As a matter of fact," he added, "I am not at all keen on the subject, as a rule. But a case like this of Jimmy's caused, as his was, by a great concussion, is exceptionally puzzling. It may adjust itself. I've been told. But such adjustment—if it comes at all—usually comes within a few days, or weeks at the most. When they go as long as Jimmy's has gone, without any marked change, then the operation seems to be the only recourse. But that isn't saying, you understand," he qualified quickly, "that I suggest an operation. But I do advise an examination by specialists. And it's quite likely they will advise an operation!"

While Pat was asking her questions and during the doctor's rather lengthy replies the subject being discussed stood quietly at Margery's side. This position he had attained some time before the arrival of Rex and the doctor, by the simple expedient on her part of slipping her arm under his, grasping his wrist firmly, and then gently impelling, or urging him in the way he should go. Since she had not released her hold on his wrist, he had gone only as far as she had gone.

As Dr. Gordon completed his answer to Pat's question about specialists, Aunt Lottie opened the door dividing the living room from the spacious hall and announced that dinner was ready. Margery laughed at her Aunt's use of the old-fashioned expression, whereupon the worthy lady appealed to Pat to settle the long-standing argument between her niece and herself. Said Aunt Lottie:

"I claim the term 'dinner is served,' is a form that was originated by the English butler in Victoria's generation, and should be used only when a butler, or at any rate, a man waiter, makes the announcement. When, as in the present case, the hostess does the announcing, I contend that she should say, 'Dinner is ready.' Which, in your opinion, is proper, Pat?"

In reply to which the young girl laughed, and said, with fine diplomacy:

"Caesar's wife, they say, could do no wrong, because—she was Caesar's wife! I would say that my hostess, be she right or wrong, is right because—she is my hostess!"

Pat's answer, given as it was, on the spur of the moment, without time for any thought or preparation, elicited a laugh from every one of her small audience. To Rex Dallard and the doctor it was just another evidence of the tact and cleverness that went into the making of Pat's engaging personality. She never purposely said anything that might hurt another's feelings.

Both the lieutenant and the doctor, as they seated themselves at the dining table, were possessed of a thought similar to that which had worried the minds of Margery and Pat upon their return home with Jimmy that day, and Aunt Lottie had announced that luncheon was ready. The natural query in the mind of each girl was: "How will Jimmy act at the dining table? Will he eat like a rational human being, or will he 'gloom' his food, as persons in advanced stages of paresis do?"

Just as Margery and Pat had been at luncheon, Rex and Frank were—very pleasantly surprised at what they observed in the deportment of Jimmy Blair after Margery had deftly seated him next to herself at the dining table that evening.

It has long been the contention among some persons that under no other conditions will a person so quickly delineate his or her breeding as at the dining table. But the best bred man in the world, if he had been deprived suddenly of his thinking faculties, would hardly be expected to conduct himself in the same manner that had been his when normal.

And yet that, in a large part, was the way Jimmy Blair carried on at the dining table—just about as he had been accustomed all his life, with perfect manners. It might even be said that he excelled in one respect, in that he spoke no word throughout his meal. He simply ate in a calm, decorous manner, using knife and fork properly and without awkwardness, that which was placed directly in front of him. How it could be that he was able to do these things was beyond even the doctor's understanding. It simply remains a fact that he did do them as described. The best explanation the doctor could give was that it was all subconscious on Jimmy's part—the off-put of habit.

"The secret lies, of course, in some strange psychology of the mind," averred Gordon. "The power of mind—even subconscious mind—over matter, is admitted by all students of auto-hypnotism nowadays. Myself, I am very ignorant on the subject. But I am sure there is a logical explanation for Jimmy's actions. And yet," added the doctor, as Margery gave the signal for adjournment to the living room, "with all the knowledge that science has acquired, it knows very little, in reality, about the intricate workings of the brain. The great experts will expound their theories, elucidate on this or that, talk large and fluently—and look wise! That, in fact, is about the best thing they can do—looking wise! When it comes to performance—well, that's something else again!"

"Dr. Pine agreed with me," said Pat, when they were again seated in the big, pleasantly appointed living room, "that it was best to keep entirely mum, not to let Maxwell know I've found and got Jimmy away from his clutches. For it's just as Margery said," she went on, earnestly, "Old Maxwell kidnapped Jimmy in Paris—or had him kidnapped—and will probably do it again, if he gets a chance! When he had Jimmy he had me in his power! Now, when he discovers that he no longer holds Jimmy, he will realize his danger and be desperate. And I am perfectly willing to admit that I'm afraid of Herbert Maxwell!"

C., who declares that young Butt is still her husband. This, she says, is because the divorce decree which she obtained through her attorney will not become final until January 19, 1930.

HOME SCHOOL SYSTEM IS BEING REORGANIZED UNDER NEW FORM

That instructors have been retained on the faculty of the O. S. and S. O. Home schools in the past, who had no personal knowledge of what they were employed to teach and were totally unqualified for their positions is the charge of O. K. Probasco, Home school superintendent, who is re-organizing the educational system at the institution.

Superintendent Probasco declared the Home originally had an academic school system built upon a vocational foundation and that all efforts are now being directed to change the educational system into one essentially vocational and at the same time provide a high type of academic school.

It is planned to offer more thorough vocational training in metal, woodworking and agricultural fields.

The superintendent said that when trades did not keep abreast of progress being made along academic lines the result was the Home had a trade school of an apprentice type instead of an educational type.

Formerly teacher's certificates were not always required of appli-trades, putting in teachers instead of tradesmen as heretofore and placing the schools on a par with the best public schools of the state. "Two years ago we had three distinct schools and eleven forms of trades issuing diplomas or certificates. Schools of stenography and typing, millinery and dress-making offered high school diplomas to boys and girls regardless of whether they had finished the seventh or eighth grade. That practice has been discontinued. All the schools and trades are being combined into one school system and a student must graduate from high school to obtain a diploma.

"There are now thirty-five teachers, including four trades instructors and the trades supervisor and more trades are being added."

KONJOLA FIRST MEDICINE THAT BENEFITED ME

Useful Lady Pays Tribute To Master Medicine—Ended Severe Complications.

Konjola was the first medicine that benefited me, and I fully realize that it is, indeed, the most effective of them all," says Mary S. Whitacre, Box 84.

Mrs. Mary S. Whitacre, town, a short distance from Cincinnati. "My stomach was distended. I failed to relish any food. I was torpid and sluggish, suffering from terrible dizziness, a rheumatism developed in my arms and muscles. They were weak and aching. In fact, I was nearly dying. I could not find a medicine to help me, and naturally, I had no hope in Konjola when it was recommended. But when something was done I decided to try it. At a surprise this medicine had more for me! Konjola went right to work; reached the source of my trouble, drove out the poisons, regulated my organs. Rheumatic pains are gone, and I feel like a new woman. Do you wonder that I praise Konjola?"

Konjola is a new and different medicine of 32 ingredients, 22 of which are the juices of roots and herbs, known for their medicinal value. Konjola works quickly and thoroughly at the very root, the source of the illness of the stomach, kidneys and bowels, and of malaria, neuritis and nervousness. Konjola is not designed to give temporary relief, but to give new, glorious and lasting health. Konjola is sold in Xenia at the Shaver Drug Store, and by all the druggists in all towns throughout this entire section. Adv.

DEATH BROUGHT END TO COLORFUL LIFE OF JOSEPH STEWART

Death of Joseph C. "Uncle Joe" Stewart, 87, former Xenian, in Topeka, Kan., February 4, ended a colorful career according to an obituary published in a Topeka paper. Mr. Stewart was buried in Woodland Cemetery here February 4.

Mr. Stewart was a Civil War veteran, Kansas pioneer, mining engineer, cattleman, miser, ranchman and school teacher during his long and interesting life. He was born at Oxford, O., December 12, 1842, and was a sophomore at Miami University when the war started.

He enlisted and served four years with the Northern Army in the 34th Ohio Volunteer Infantry, winning a citation for bravery from General Sheridan. After serving two years he refused an apparent attempt to West Point because he did not wish to leave his regiment.

After the war he settled at Junction City, Kan., becoming a member of the wagon trains traveling to California. At different times in his eventful life he was a miner in Arizona, a mining engineer in Santa Fe, N. M., an extensive wheat farmer in Saskatchewan, Can., and a school teacher in Glasgow, Kan.

He was associated with the Chishas and other well-known cattle kings of the pioneer days in the west and knew personally "Will Bill" Hickok, Kit Carson and other plains country figures.

He returned to Ohio in 1880 and married Miss Anna Charlton but after fifteen years here went to Saskatchewan to engage in wheat farming. He returned to Topeka twenty-five years ago. He was a lover of young people and athletics, saying these associations kept him young. He was a constant attendant at football, basketball and baseball games, saw practically every professional baseball game in Topeka for the last ten years and traveled to Kansas University for football and basketball games. It was while attending a basketball game that he suffered the heart attack that resulted in his death. He was also a bird fancier and originated the bird show at the Kansas Free Fair, serving as its superintendent until last year.

Mr. Stewart was a brother of the late Isaac and William Stewart, who were formerly in the clothing business in Xenia.

Death of Joseph C. "Uncle Joe" Stewart, 87, former Xenian, in Topeka, Kan., February 4, ended a colorful career according to an obituary published in a Topeka paper. Mr. Stewart was buried in Woodland Cemetery here February 4.

Mr. Stewart was a Civil War veteran, Kansas pioneer, mining engineer, cattleman, miser, ranchman and school teacher during his long and interesting life. He was born at Oxford, O., December 12, 1842, and was a sophomore at Miami University when the war started.

He enlisted and served four years with the Northern Army in the 34th Ohio Volunteer Infantry, winning a citation for bravery from General Sheridan. After serving two years he refused an apparent attempt to West Point because he did not wish to leave his regiment.

After the war he settled at Junction City, Kan., becoming a member of the wagon trains traveling to California. At different times in his eventful life he was a miner in Arizona, a mining engineer in Santa Fe, N. M., an extensive wheat farmer in Saskatchewan, Can., and a school teacher in Glasgow, Kan.

He was associated with the Chishas and other well-known cattle kings of the pioneer days in the west and knew personally "Will Bill" Hickok, Kit Carson and other plains country figures.

He returned to Ohio in 1880 and married Miss Anna Charlton but after fifteen years here went to Saskatchewan to engage in wheat farming. He returned to Topeka twenty-five years ago. He was a lover of young people and athletics, saying these associations kept him young. He was a constant attendant at football, basketball and baseball games, saw practically every professional baseball game in Topeka for the last ten years and traveled to Kansas University for football and basketball games. It was while attending a basketball game that he suffered the heart attack that resulted in his death. He was also a bird fancier and originated the bird show at the Kansas Free Fair, serving as its superintendent until last year.

Mr. Stewart was a brother of the late Isaac and William Stewart, who were formerly in the clothing business in Xenia.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Give none offense, neither to the Jews, nor to the Gentiles, nor to the church of God: Even as I please all men in all things, not seeking mine own profit, but the profit of many, that they may be saved.—I Corinthians, x, 32, 33.

REFORMING NATION?

An American magazine, which has dedicated itself to the spacious task of reforming the nation, donates a page to the effort to stamp out "one of America's worst bad habits." This practice is borrowing books! The five cardinal sins involved in it are:

- You cut an author's royalties in half.
- You impose on your friends.
- You keep the prices of books up.
- You harm your local bookseller.
- You also keep libraries from buying books.

The only one of these charges that has any foundation is the second. All the others are bunk, absolute and unadulterated. The practice of borrowing "dulls the edge of husbandry" and therefore is to be frowned upon, whether it be borrowing books or automobiles or toothbrushes. You wouldn't expect a friend to lend you his wife. Well, we've seen men who thought more of their books than they did of their wives; and we have seen wives whom it would have been harder to tell in love with than some books.

A world of difference divides borrowing and lending, although the magazine to which we allude apparently can't see it, any more than Shakespeare could. One partakes of begging; and the other of the superior blessedness of giving to taking. Good books are like good friends. Your enjoyment of them is doubled by sharing them with people you like. Whoever tries to make you feel like a criminal when you lend a book or accept the loan of a book freely offered you, acts as complementary to each other as the purchase and sale to make a Volstead felony, would have the impudence to call you a brute for introducing one friend to another.

The sheer impertinence of this campaign against the borrowers of books is revealed by the statement that it is not directed at lending and public libraries. They admittedly "actually increase the sales of books." The individual culprit against whom this anathema is laid is left to wonder why his lending a book to a friend doesn't increase its sales as much as a library's lending the same book to the same friend!

GRAND OPERA

After a person of ordinary susceptibility to emotional and artistic stimuli has once made the plunge. There probably is nothing in the world quite as glamorous and fascinating as opera, particularly opera presented with the proper finish and the completeness, and on the scale characteristic of the productions by the few leading opera groups now in existence.

It is only to the person who remains aloof and declines to taste, that opera seems "high brow" and forbidding or difficult. Those who sample in earnest, are very apt to find themselves addicts almost before they knew they have acquired a taste.

The individual who wants a thrill, a real thrill which lasts, and recurs, and bubbles up again and again, and sometimes leaves a "hang over" persisting for hours and even days, can acquire one almost any time by going to listen to a discreetly selected opera, done as it ought to be done. Likewise, he who finds pleasure in artistic conceptions and sheer beauty, may indulge himself in an opera house as he will be able to indulge himself in few other places.

In parts of the world, where the art of living, as opposed to endurance of existence, is cultivated more skillfully than it is cultivated by most of us in this corner of creation, all that is generally understood. Opera is for everybody, just as the stage, the movie and the baseball game are for everybody here; and the years are richer, more flecked with color, and fuller of flavor in consequence.

If a taste for opera must sometimes be acquired, at least it is not difficult to gain, and we can think of none more worth while, or that brings bigger returns.

STARVING ARTISTS?

Stories, sometimes in magazines and sometimes in books, occasionally in newspapers, tell us about "artists starving in their attics." It would seem that a careless public is little interested in art. But perhaps the trouble is with the so-called artist himself. Mrs. Herbert Pell, New York society woman and painter, thinks so. She says:

"There are no such things as starving artists. If they were artists they wouldn't be starving. I've investigated them. Always their work is scratchy stuff that has to be explained. You can't tell what it is by looking at it. If they could paint portraits of women and children, which are just as essential to a household as furniture and carpets, they wouldn't go hungry."

RESULTS

What is true about artists or alleged artists is pretty much true about us all. Except for those handicapped by bad health or the most extraordinary circumstances, most of us get about what's coming to us. If we starve it isn't likely to be a matter of bad luck. It's likely to be because we produce bad goods or are too lazy to produce anything. Most of us get a pretty fair chance and most of us fritter it away. Life for many is passed in the waiting room, the ante-room of better things. We are going to do something about it some day, but not today.

ANTI-CRIME

The New York police department makes an intelligent approach to the problem of crime. Most crime, as everybody knows, is committed by young people. The new idea is to seek to prevent crime by taking an interest in youngsters who are found in low dance halls and the cheap sort of movie theatres. New York's 66 policemen have been assigned to the job of touring the least desirable places where young people gather. They will interview and advise and, if thought best, communicate with parents. The idea is to sow anti-crime seeds. Other cities may well watch the New York experiment.

TAKING HIS MEDICINE

The prime minister of Japan has been preaching economy and retrenchment. Believing in national economy, he thinks he ought to get an example by practicing private economy. Not so many people think it advisable or pleasant to practice what they preach. Mr. Hamaguchi is different. When his son married, the father limited the cost of the ceremony to $25 and the honeymoon to $125. He said that each of the 300 guests might be entertained with refreshments, but the cost was not to run over $250 for each. The bride's parents, feeling differently, spent more than $5,000 in earlier preparations.

THE QUESTION BOX

CENTRAL PRESS
WASHINGTON BUREAU

Answers to questions of information and fact can be obtained by writing to Central Press Bureau, P. O. Box 128, Washington, D. C., and enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope. No answers will be given to marital, medical or legal questions.

A question box reader would like to know if it is true that King George of England opened the London naval conference with a speech which his ministers had prepared for him without being permitted to change a word—or if the British ministry simply agreed on a general policy and, within prescribed limits the king was allowed to write his own address.

It is a fact that the king of England expresses himself with no such freedom as the president of the United States. Generally speaking, the ministry prepares all royal addresses and the king recites them word for word. This is not a written rule but it is well understood and the king positively would endanger his position if he broke it—at least in any important particular. It so happens, however, that King George V was educated for the navy and probably understands its necessities better than most of his ministers—not as a king but as a technical expert. Therefore it is reasonable to believe that he really had a good deal to say about this particular speech. Nevertheless he certainly did not deliver it without the finished product's detailed O. K. by his ministry.

Danish Money

What kind of money and what is the value of a coin stamped "1 Killing Danske K. M." and dated 1771?

Danish. No value here. It may have some in Denmark.

Mexican Immigration

Is it by act of congress that certain employers are permitted to bring Mexican labor into the United States? Who is the chairman of the congressional committee on immigration?

No law forbids the admission of workers from Mexico or Canada. The quota law does not cover them. However, they may not be brought in under contract and it is unlikely that anyone is doing so on that basis. Senator Hiram W. Johnson of California is chairman of the senate committee on immigration; Representative Albert Johnson of Washington is chairman of the corresponding committee of the house of representatives.

Inland Waterways

Is there any real prospect of fulfillment of the plan to create a waterway from Washington to Pittsburgh by way of the Potomac and Cumberland (Md.)? If so, when?

Inland waterways are receiving strong encouragement of late, but it is too soon to guess on specific projects or dates.

Blind Production

What is "blind production," referred to by Secretary of Agriculture Hyatt?

The planting and cultivation of crops without regard to the probable market for them at harvest time.

CARTOONS OF THE DAY

Unrecognized by Senate Deserters, Hard Luck Dogs Watson's Footsteps

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Senator James Watson, of Indiana, is under something of a cloud.

As leader of the so-called majority of his fellow senators he has had hard luck. It was not his fault. His leadership, beginning when congress met in extra session last April, got off at a particularly bad time.

On paper the G. O. P. had 56 votes to the opposition's 39, besides one independent. True, two or three of Watson's 56 were unreliable. At worst, however, the Hoover generalissimo appeared to have the rival forces outclassed by a margin of nine or ten, even if they all combined against him. The very fact that every indication seemed to favor him was what made the collapse of his hopes, which speedily followed, only more noticeable.

The first disaster to overtake him was the secession from his banner, not of a mere two or three progressives, but of fourteen of them. They not only quit him but they joined the enemy for the time being.

As a majority leader, with a majority of a dozen against him, he was in an embarrassing situation.

Yet it was not as embarrassing as it has become since then—with the detachment of the Hoover bloc from his battalion—some sixteen more of his henchmen who have repudiated his authority. To be sure, they did not flop clear over, like the first fourteen, but they no longer recognize Watson.

A leader who loses more than half his command by desertion, while the fight actually is raging, can hardly be said to have made much of a success of his leadership.

Nevertheless, Watson has not done so badly. The desertions he has sustained were inevitable. The "organization" cause—certainly not the progressive cause nor the White House cause, but the "old guards," the "organization," the deserters were not loyal organization members. Some of the progressives never pretended to be. The others were attached to it very loosely. The Hoover senators did belong, but they have gone over to the Hoover organization—and neither Watson nor anyone else could have stopped them as soon as they had made up their minds that it was the safest organization for them to tie up with.

Impossible as it may seem in politics, the progressives are pretty honest. Right or wrong, their group is a matter of conscience with them—or largely so. The Hoover bloc's members may be correct in their judgment that they are safer in that fold than they would be to remain in the old guard ranks. The fact remains that Watson is an old guard stand pater. In his own peculiar fashion, it is a matter of conscience with him to stick by his original organization, about as much as progressive-ism is a matter of conscience with the progressives.

Watson could have flopped, too. Not along with the progressives. He never would have done that. But he might have flopped over from the old guard in among the Hoover young guardsmen—and a preserved a considerably stronger following to accompany his leadership.

He can have refrained from doing so upon but one of two grounds:

1. Either he did not consider it good business, believing that the old guard standard ultimately will triumph, or else—

2. He remains unflopped as a matter of principle. Or maybe for both reasons. At any rate, Watson was held together a better old guard nucleus than might have been expected.

It is exceedingly alarming to a leader and even the most faithful little handful of adherents to see a majority disintegrate as Watson's majority disintegrated for awhile in the U. S. senate. It would not have been surprising if it had gone to pieces utterly. The Watson phalanx is still a tolerably solid little aggregation. It is sadly depleted, but it hangs on, fighting gloriously.

And who says that a leader's mettle is not tried in adversity? Besides, Watson is a num-dinger of a politician. It may prove that some of the deserters who left him so unceremoniously will wish they had stayed under the old banner.

Vegetable Combinations for Salads

1. One part peas, three parts salmon.
2. Salmon, onions, pickles; garnish with hard-boiled eggs.
3. Meat, pickles, celery, mayonnaise.
4. Potatoes, celery, onion, peas, chopped beets; parsley garnish.
5. Shredded cabbage, nuts, celery apples.
6. Carrots, celery, raisins (cook carrots).

Sweet Cider Jelly

Measure one quart sweet apple cider and seven and one-half cups sugar into large sauce pan. Stir, bring to boil. Stir in one cup bottled pectin and bring again to a full rolling boil. Boil hard one minute. Remove from fire, let stand one minute. Skim, pour quickly. Makes about eleven eight-ounce glasses.

Removing Mud Stains

Allow mud stains to dry and brush carefully before any other treatment is used. Sometimes nothing else is needed. If it is, however, and the fabric is washable, use soap and water. If the article is not washable, sponge the stains with alcohol, either wood or denatured.

Cooking Hints

Use white raisins in cakes or puddings not to be darkened by spices, as they do not discolor the dough. They are not as easy to find as the ordinary dark raisins, but they are on the market quite generally.

Granulated tapioca is better than flour for thickening juicy pies, and cracker crumbs add a nutty effect to apple or mince pies. Also, the sweet liquid left from pickled fruits or fruit juices left from canning make the finest mixer to be found for mince or raisin pies. A little left-over canned fruit will add a flavor all its own. Try a pie made of apples, raisins and cracker crumbs, with sweet spiced pickle syrup or cherry juice, and see how good it is!

HEALTHFUL DESSERT

APRICOT WHIP

(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe)—One and one-half cups cooked dried apricots, four tablespoons sugar, juice one lemon, one cup cream, whipped. Chop apricots, add sugar and lemon juice. Fold into whipped cream and chill for several hours.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.
Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children"

Diet in Tuberculosis

"DEAR DOCTOR: A friend of mine, a man of 40 years of age, has an inflammation around his nose. I believe it is called lupus. I recently read of a Berlin doctor who claims to have cured lupus through dietetic treatment, and I have persuaded my friend to try a vegetarian diet for a while, and he is doing it. Is this of any use? Is the condition dangerous, and is it form of cancer? Can you tell me something of its nature?"

"MR. F."

If the condition is lupus, it is not cancer. Mr. F., but skin tuberculosis (called, in medical terminology, lupus vulgaris). It may attack any portion of the skin, but is most frequently found on the face.

The direct cause of lupus is the germ of tuberculosis. Usually the person who has this affliction has or has had, tuberculosis elsewhere in his body and the germs have been transported to the skin by the blood or lymph. We know that the tuberculosis germ is most apt to propagate in tissues whose resistance is lowered, especially by prolonged wrong diet, particularly one lacking in vitamin A and mineral elements.

The diet you have read of is probably the diet originated by a Dr. Gerson, of Germany. It is also known as the salt-free basic vitamin diet. This has proved very successful with lupus and is being tried out in other forms of tuberculosis, including pulmonary, with varying success. Some report that they get no better results than with the diet that has long been favored, and others say it is more successful.

In the December 14, 1929, issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, a preliminary report of this diet given by Drs. May and Krugelmass. They had favorable results in several cases that had failed to respond to the usual diet and treatment, but they do not go on record as stating that they think this diet is curative, on account of the limited number of cases studied.

Salt is entirely eliminated from the diet; that means from cooked dishes also. The diet is high in fats, vitamins and mineral elements, and low in carbohydrates (starches and sugars). It consists chiefly of vegetables and fruit (raw or very little cooked), butter, milk in all form (drinks, cheeses, custards), and moderate amount of meat. From 2700 to 3000 calories are taken daily, divided into seven meals. The you see, makes a diet that is very high in vitamins and minerals, and is basic, or alkaline.

There is a combination of mineral salts given after each meal. One and one-half teaspoonful of phosphate cod liver oil is also given daily. With this dietary and medication go the usual air and sunbaths (for the lupus and glandular tuberculosis, the so-called surgical tuberculosis.)

Local Treatment of Lupus: Treatment with an especially constructed light, called the Finsterlight, which consists principally of ultra-violet rays, is much used. This was originated by a Dr. Finsen, of Copenhagen. I visited the Finsen Institute while I was in Copenhagen a few years ago, and saw many patients with lupus vulgaris being treated and many returning check-ups, who were apparently cured. The X-ray is also used, as well as surgery. Of treatments and diets at various times are used where these agencies cannot be employed.

One suffering from lupus vulgaris is must certainly be under the care of a skillful physician.

Those who are interested in tuberculosis may have our article on the subject. This gives a list of books on the subject written by authorities for the layman.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Peters cannot diagnose nor give personal advice. Your questions, if of general interest, will be answered in this column in their turn. Requests for articles or pamphlets on hand may be accompanied by a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope, plus the following "mail charge to help cover cost of printing and handling for each article wanted, two cents in coin; for each pamphlet, five cents in coin. The pamphlets are: Reducing and Gaining, Hygiene, Women, Kidney and Bladder Disorders. Address Dr. Peters, in care of this paper. Write legibly, not over 200 words.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

A RECENT newspaper article cites that a questionnaire sent to male students at a large eastern university "reveals" that a majority of them think that the present code of morals is all wrong. Said students are quoted as believing in sex relations outside of matrimony, that marriage is not the logical conclusion of a serious attachment for a woman, and that religion has no appeal to them.

The women students were not favored with a chance to express their views.

Now, while this questionnaire with its answers may strike terror to the hearts of some people, as meaning that the younger generation is headed straight for purgatory as regards morals, etc., and that henceforth the world is no longer safe for "good folks," some of us will laugh, remembering our own youth and the many, many young folks we have known who talked in this way—which appeals to a very young person as being the acme of cynicism and sophistication.

We will recall that those same young men fell in love—even as you and I—married the girl in the same old prosaic way—which seemed very new and wonderful to them at the time—and became highly respectable father families who worried, in their turn, when the youthful progeny expressed unorthodox views on things as they are.

Folks—especially young folks—love to talk as if the conventions were anathema to them. But, confront them with unconventional or unethical conduct in one of their own set, and get their reactions. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." In his HEART—not with his tongue, you see.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: Reading your column recently I saw Mrs.

Daily Walk Creates Active Form

To us today the idea of walking or running seems simple, far too simple to warrant much of our serious attention, which is a sad mistake. We moderns not only walk too little, but we walk very badly.

Most of us, at least the women of us, need to learn to walk all over again. And it is interesting in this connection to remember that our way of walking, although we have terribly abused it as a function in its upright fashion at all. Our early, early ancestors, thousands of years ago, seldom walked erect. Even today, our children must be taught to walk. They crawl and creep first, and it usually takes them a year to acquire the proper co-ordination and balance to walk alone and erect. If we may believe our eminent anthropologists and other scientists, man has paid dearly for this privilege of walking instead of crawling and creeping all through his life. Fatigue and disease have more than paid him, for Nature intended us to walk in a horizontal rather than in a vertical position, and arranged our human organs accordingly. When we stood up to walk, a natural strain resulted, and our entire circulation, also, was embarrassed. To compensate for fatigue this caused and still causing, we need more sleep than any of the other animals. But we even managed to adapt our chosen, or adopted, fashion of walking upright—which makes, situation of fatigue and strain doubly bad. And this, however, afield I may have wandered, is why I intended to correct today. Very few women really know how to walk. Nor, for that matter, do they ever walk enough to make use of the knowledge when they have it. And yet, next to swimming, I do not know of any exercise so helpful to the development of a healthy, active young body.

If you would rise ten minutes earlier in the morning and walk part way to your office, it would wonders for you in starting the right.

Walking is a sport, too, not only means to the end of a perfect functioning body, but an end in itself. Put rhythm and vim in your stride, swing forward from the hip, not from the knee as so many women do, and distance will seem to you. Correct walking is a play to all the muscles, if you let

At Ohio State they are singing the praises of one Jesse A. Stewart, whose home town is Yellow Springs.

Stewart, who is a junior and next May will celebrate his twenty-sixth birthday, stands six feet three inches in his bare feet, and his performance at center on the basketball team was held largely responsible for the revival of the Ohio State quintet recently in a return engagement with Purdue, leader of the Western Conference basketball race.

It seems that after the Ohioans took a 60 to 14 lacing in a game with Purdue several weeks before, Coach Olsen sat up nights devising ways and means of stopping "Stretch" Murphy, elongated center of Purdue, in a coming return game. Murphy collected twenty-eight points against the Buckeyes in the first game.

In the second game, with Stewart, the new find, jumping center for State, the Ohio team put up a whole of a battle, although losing 27 to 25 in an overtime contest.

By every law State should have lost once more to the Boilermakers without putting up half a scrap despite the fact Fessler, star guard, did not play against Purdue the first time.

In seeking an explanation of why the Ohioans "about faced" so suddenly, due credit is being given the Yellow Springs boy. He held Murphy to one field goal before he was disqualified on personal fouls late in the game. Stewart also performed well against Illinois last Monday although the Scarlet lost.

Some people said that Westlie Fessler brought about the remarkable reversal of form the Buckeyes displayed against the Hoosier aggregation, but in the opinion of some 5,000 fans who witnessed the game, Stewart, a big 191-pounder, previously unheralded and unsung, had much to do with the excellent work of the team.

Now all the followers of the State team are asking this question: "Where has he been all these years?"

Stewart, although his home town is in Yellow Springs, acquired his high school education at Plattsburg in Clark County, where he played basketball four years. Then he was a lanky center. Now he is classed as State's biggest "find" in years.

At Plattsburg High Stewart also participated in both baseball and track but he has made basketball his specialty since enrolling at State. As an intercollegiate player he never had seemed to be able to make the grade but his luck is apparently due to take a turn for the better.

This season Stewart went out for basketball again but became discouraged because of the good work of Condon and Wrigley. Following the painful experience of the Buckeye team at Lafayette Stewart began to long for a crack at Murphy. On the advice of friends he talked the matter over with Coach Olsen and it was finally agreed that he should jump center against "Stretch."

And the big fellow came through with flying colors. He personally scored two baskets for four points while his noted rival was limited to seven. Two baskets obtained by Murphy were registered in the closing minutes after Stewart was no longer in the game, having retired on personals.

Piqua High's hope of tripping up Xenia Central in the closing Miami Valley League game of the season at the local gym Friday night were lessened considerably through the disclosure that Tom Ramsey, veteran guard, will not be in the lineup because of poor physical condition. Ramsey has been one of the mainstays on the Piqua quintet for several seasons and the "Gentlemen" will be weakened quite a bit through his loss.

Present indications are that Spring Valley, defending champion, and Ross Twp. will fight it out for the 1930 county Class B basketball title in the coming tournament. If the seeding system is used and these two teams are placed in opposite brackets, it is considered almost certain they will reach the finals. This conclusion is based on the fact Spring Valley has lost only one game this season—a defeat by Bellbrook which was later avenged. Ross Twp. was beaten by Cedarville early in the season but this setback was also avenged a few weeks later by a convincing margin. Spring Valley and Ross have not met to date in a pre-tournament game.

WILMINGTON BEATS ANTIOCH IN STALLING GAME BY 19-12 SCORE

Carrying the art of stalling to a point of perfection seldom seen on a basketball court, the Wilmington College basketball quintet hung up its eighteenth victory in nineteen games this season by defeating Antioch College's Division "B" team, 19 to 12 in a slow game Thursday night on the Wilmington floor.

Wilmington had a margin of 8 to 7 at the half and for a solid ten minutes at the start of the last half the Quaker team "froze" the ball. Making no attempt to penetrate the set Antioch defense the Wilmington players merely passed the sphere around among themselves under the basket until finally Antioch became impatient and came down the floor after the ball.

Antell, Antioch center, shot a basket from three-fourths the length of the floor to put his team into a momentary lead, 9 to 8, but the advantage again shifted when Boxwell, Xenia lad, sank a basket.

THE 1930 NASH "400"

Nash is the car with the Oil Cushioned Chassis

SUPERIOR PERFORMANCE!

EVERY Nash "400" model, including those of lowest price, is now equipped with a modern system of centralized chassis lubrication. Nash "400" chassis bearings ride on a cushion of oil. Not just once in a while, or for a day or so after you happen to put your car in a service station for greasing. But every day, and without the bother of service station attention, the "400" chassis gives you the riding smoothness and the longer chassis life that only perfect chassis lubrication can give. And every Twin-Ignition Eight and Six model is now built with lifetime lubricated springs—lubrication sealed inside flexible steel spring covers—permanent protection against rust, squeaks, wear and ineffectual spring action. The combination of centralized lubrication and lifetime lubricated springs creates an oil-cushioned chassis—another reason for the superior performance that distinguishes the 1930 Nash "400!"

GEORGE WASHINGTON AND THE CHURCH

As we celebrate the birthday of the Father of our country, it is wise to recall his words regarding the place of religion and the church in our national life.

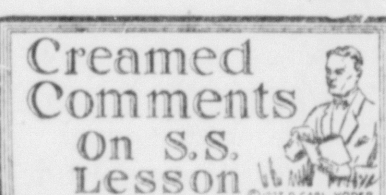

"Believing as I do that religion and morality are essential pillars of civil society, I view with unspeakable pleasure that harmony and brotherly love which characterize the clergy of different denominations, exhibiting to the world a new and interesting spectacle at once the pride of our country and the surest basis of universal harmony."

"It affords edifying prospects, indeed, to see Christians of every denomination dwell together in more charity and conduct themselves in respect to each other with a more Christian like spirit than ever they have done in any former age or in any other nation."

The church is the central meeting place for all Christians. Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?—D. Carl Yoder.

LANG'S

John the Baptist had been in prison almost a year when Jesus came in Galilee with a few disciples. John wanted his faith strengthened.

Vs. 2, 3. "Now when Jesus heard in the prison the works of the Christ, he sent by his disciples and said unto him, art thou he that comest, or look we for another?"

The three reasons why John asked this question are these: (1) to convince his disciples; (2) to induce Jesus publicly to avow his Messiahship; (3) to confirm his own faith in Jesus.

The course to pursue when doubts arise is to get in touch with Jesus, for doubt drives us away from Christ; but it is a good thing when it drives us to him for fuller truth and life.

V. 4. "And Jesus answered and said unto them, Go and tell John the things which ye hear and see."

Jesus did not undertake to do John's thinking for him, so he sent him facts and told him to work out the answer for himself. God has given us a mind to be used in connection with our Christian faith.

V. 5. "The blind receive their sight and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed and the deaf hear, and the poor have good tidings preached to them."

Jesus performed works which none but the Messiah could do so that he was the Christ. The climax in the list of his works was "the poor have the gospel preached to them."

V. 6. "And blessed is he, whosoever shall find no occasion of stumbling in me." That is, happy is he who shall not take offense at my poverty and lowliness in life so as to reject me and my doctrine. John did not fully understand Christ expecting that he would condemn rather than serve. Christianity is a continual revelation of Christ, so that we continually change our conception of him.

Vs. 25, 26. "Jesus said, I thank thee, O Father... that thou didst hide these things from the wise and understanding and didst reveal them unto babes... for it was well pleasing in thy sight." Jesus now assumed a meditative and prayerful mood likely due to the prevailing worldliness and wickedness and unbelief of men as reported by the disciples who had just returned from a missionary journey. It is good when disappointed to meditate and pray and find something for which to be grateful. The wise and understanding were those whose dead orthodox pride and worldly wisdom had encased them so as to shut out the light and life; the babes were humble souls whose teachable spirits made them receptive of truth.

V. 27. "All things have been delivered unto me of my Father and no one knoweth the Son, save the Father, neither doth any know the Father save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will to reveal him." Here is a note of authority, "all things have been delivered unto me." The revelation of God was the object of Christ's incarnation. The world misunderstood Jesus as it may understand us, his followers, but the source of comfort and peace is the fact that God knows and understands.

V. 28. "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." There are many physical and social burdens but the greatest burden is mental in which are found the perplexing questions of life and death, the world and God, time and eternity. The highest rest corresponds with the greatest burden, which makes soul rest. Note that this rest is conditioned on coming to him.

Vs. 29, 30. "Take my yoke upon you and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls." For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light. The yoke teaches that real fellowship with Christ makes possible his bearing the biggest end of the load.

Describe the religion of a Junior boy or girl.

Since the program of worship for the juniors must meet the religious status of this age, it is important that something of the religious life of this period be taken into consideration.

Rev. William S. Mitchell, pastor of the Wesley Church, Worcester, Mass., in his book, "A Seven Day Church at Work," says "Religion changes with the conceptions of the individual. It is not the same thing to a primary child and a junior. The latter thinks in a different way and this difference in thinking, in feeling, must necessarily express itself in the junior child's religion as well. The God of the junior is not the benevolent lov-

WASHINGTON'S EXAMPLE OF INDUSTRY

While commander-in-chief of the Continental army, Washington one day came across a band of soldiers working very hard trying to raise some military works. They were in command of a pompous little officer, who was enjoying authority and giving orders in a very pre-emptory style.

Washington, seeing these very arduous labors on the part of the men, descended from his horse and lent a helping hand until the weight of the works was raised. Turning to the officer in charge, he inquired why he too had not helped. He received the indignant reply, "Why, don't you know that I am a corporal?"

"Ah, well," said Washington, "Next time your men are raising a very heavy weight, send for your commander-in-chief, and he rode off, leaving the corporal dumb-founded."

Discussion on S.S. Lesson

1. What caused John's doubting? How did Jesus remove John's doubts?

2. When is doubt harmful and when helpful?

3. How may we solve our doubts?

4. What are the causes and what

5. What was Jesus' yoke?

6. How alone may we know God as our Father?

Dr. J. H. Jewett says, "The world's way of giving rest is by removing a man's yoke. That is not the Lord's way. The restful life is not the easy life—life without burdens. The gift of Jesus is a gift of rest while wearing the yoke, rest while carrying the cross, rest in the very midst of mystery, temptation and strife."

Lesson Prayer, "Help us to come to thee, O Lord, for the settlement of our doubts, for the strength when burdened, for rest when weary."

JOHN MARSHALL'S TRIBUTE TO WASHINGTON

"If Washington possessed ambition, that quality was in his bosom so regulated by principle or controlled by circumstances, that it was neither vicious or turbulent. In truth, was never employed as the means of its gratification, nor was personal aggrandizement its object. The various high and important stations to which he was called by the public were unsought by himself and in consenting to fill them, he seemed rather to have yielded to a general conviction that the interests of the country would be thereby promoted, than to an avidity for power. Endowed by nature with a sound judgment and an accurate discrimination, he was guided by an unvarying sense of moral right which would tolerate the employment of only those means which would bear the most rigid inspection, which neither sought nor required disguise and by a purity of motive which was not only untainted but unsuspected."

A New York jury disagreed Wednesday and was discharged in the $100,000 alienation of affections suit of Mrs. Mabel Manton, former wife of William Kevitt Manton, actor and stage manager, against Marjorie Rambeau, actress.

It was the second trial, the first ending in 1926 when the Manton was reported to have effected reconciliation while the jury was out. Miss Rambeau did not appear in court to defend herself. Her counsel said she was in Los Angeles at the bedside of her sick mother and that she was "broke". She hasn't the carfare to come to New York," he said.

Mrs. Manton testified that she came to America from Glasgow with her husband in 1923 and that her husband met Miss Rambeau in production in which they both played. She said he went to Beth-

Not all the actors who come from Poland become unhappy here, however, as indicated by the popularity which has greeted the Oxford accent with the talkies while the Hungarians, Germans, Russians, French, Scandinavian and Spanish players find their imperfect English causing their popularity to wane.

Among the men making good here are Ralph Forbes, Basil Rathbone, Anthony Bushell, Colin Clive, Lupino Lane, Alec B. Francis, Claude Allister, Clive Brook and Ronald Colman. Women members of the British colony include Dorothy Mackall, Flora Bramley, Lella Nyman and others. Maurice Chevalier, the Frenchman, has enjoyed some success in the talkies despite his accent and all of the players with accents get some work in plays that call for characters with such accents. Thus Fifi D'Orsay, with Will Rogers in "They Had to See Paris", gave a much better interpretation of the role than would have an English-speaking actress attempting a French accent.

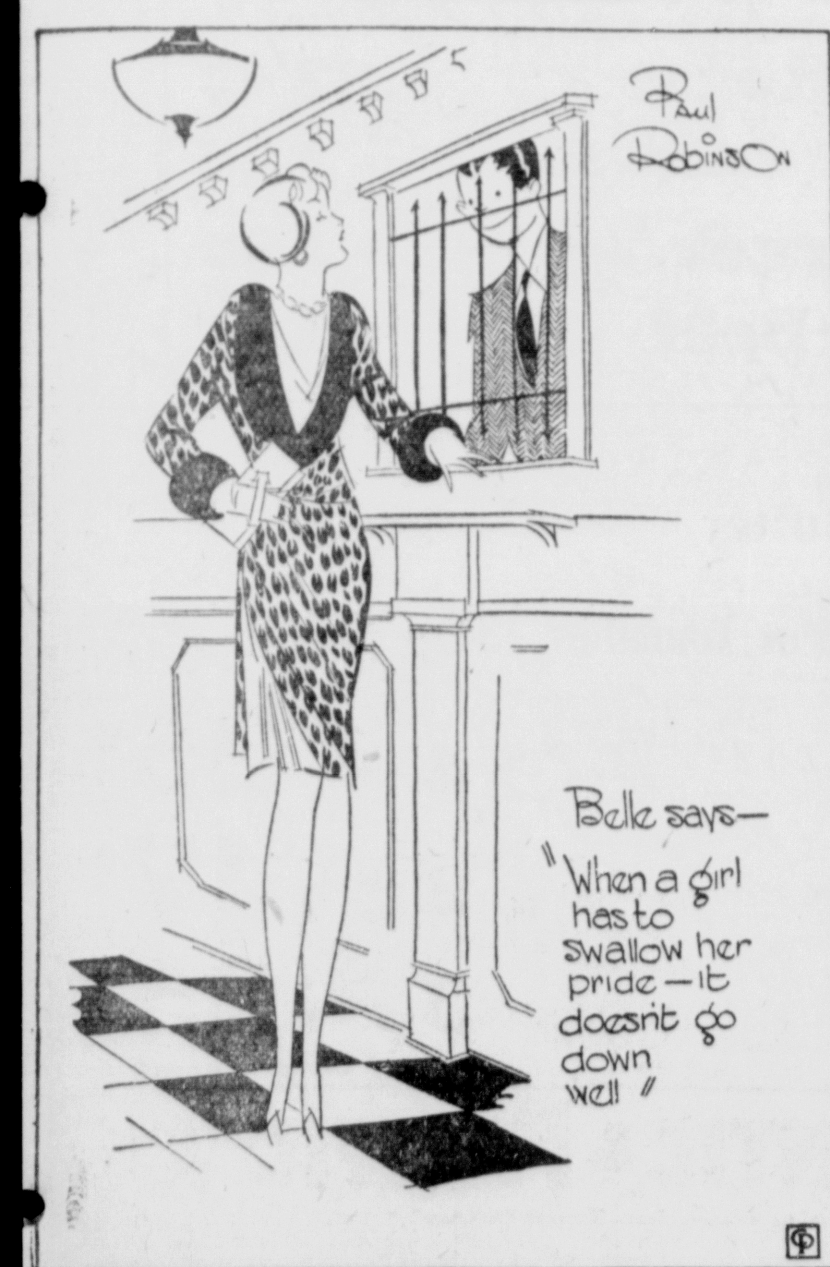

The eight best pictures of the month, as selected by Photoplay magazine, are: "Anna Christie", "The Rogue Song", "Street of Chance", "The Laughing Lady", "Roadhouse Nights", "No, No, Nanette", "Men Without Women" and "The Case of Sergeant Grischa".

FATHER DEFENDANT IN ACTION BROUGHT BY CHILDREN HERE

Charging that the defendant has violated the terms of the will of his mother, Phoebe Hyde, under which he fell heir to two village lots in Yellow Springs and 49.58 acres of real estate in Miami Twp. upon her death in 1903, Anna Bruney, Stella Thompson and Margaret Hyde have filed suit against their father, John Hyde, in Common Pleas Court, seeking to have his ownership of the properties declared forfeited and asking they be declared the legal owners.

In violation of a codicil of the will, their father has permitted the real estate to become encumbered, the taxes have not been paid for four years and delinquent taxes now amount to $823.49 in addition to the delinquent charge for 1929, the daughters claim.

The daughters assert the property is in a run-down condition, their father cannot pay the delinquent taxes and the properties will be sold at a delinquent tax sale. A temporary restraining order preventing the defendant from collecting rents for the property is also sought. Attorney F. L. Johnson represents the plaintiffs.

TWO SEEK DIVORCE

On grounds of extreme cruelty Maud McColaugh has brought suit in Common Pleas Court for divorce from Earl McColaugh, declaring her husband once pointed a loaded gun at her and threatened to kill her. They were married in October, 1913. The plaintiff seeks to be decreed custody of their three minor children, Richard, 15, Jack, 11, and Marian, 4, and asks that a temporary restraining order be issued enjoining the defendant from disposing of their household goods.

Charging extreme cruelty Alvie Impson has filed suit for divorce from Mary Impson, whom he married October 5, 1927.

FORECLOSURE ASKED

Suit for $663.66 and foreclosure of mortgaged property has been filed in Common Pleas Court by The Home Building and Savings Co. against Jennie Hawkins Gilbert, James C. Hawkins and Samuel Hawkins. Elijah Gilbert and Rosa Hawkins, having dower interests, and Edith Byrd and Hauck Bros., having mechanic's liens, are named co-defendants. Harry D. Smith is attorney for the plaintiff.

ESTATE VALUED

Estate of John Buck, deceased, has a gross value of $7,345.05, according to an estimate on file in Probate Court. Debts and the cost of administration amount to $4,054.91, leaving a net value of $3,290.14.

HEARING FIXED

Application filed in Probate Court seeking to admit to probate the last will of William Harbine Haggen-Buck, late of Beaver Creek Twp., has been set for a hearing at 1 p. m. February 24.

EDISON'S FORMULA IS WORK

That's How To Be Happy Says Inventor, Says People Use Only Part Of Brains

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
(Copyright 1930 By I. N. S.)
FORT MYERS, Fla., Feb. 20.—Thomas A. Edison believes man uses only a very small part of his brain.

He thinks people are "just beginning to suspect" how to live. He does not know whether human beings exist on other planets. His formula for happiness is "work."

He believes the standard of living in America will be very much higher, eventually.

He has never been "thrilled" by any of his great achievements.

The world renowned inventor, interviewed exclusively today by International News Service at his laboratory here where he is making intensive research work on rubber-producing plants, gave interesting and characteristically Edisonian replies to a barrage of questions which were asked him.

"What was the hardest job you ever encountered?" Mr. Edison was asked.

"This rubber experiment job is the most complex proposition I ever struck, and that's the reason I like it," he replied.

"He revealed he still is putting in long, hard hours. He said he goes to work in his laboratory at 9 a. m. and frequently works until 6 p. m. Sometimes he works at his house from 7 p. m. until 10 or 11 p. m. He glanced at a cat in his laboratory as he talked. It was tucked under a table filled with all kinds of mysterious looking bottles.

"Next to rubber what was your toughest scientific task?" he was asked.

"Well, I think the quadrex was a hard proposition," Edison answered thoughtfully. "The electric light was hard, too, because too many things had to be done to make it a commercial success."

He did not mention the phonograph, which he invented, nor the motion picture camera, the stock ticker and numerous other devices. The quadrex was a telegraph achievement. The machine permitted two messages to go each way over a single wire at the same time.

"What do you regard as your greatest scientific achievement, the one that did the most for mankind?" was another question.

Edison replied that he could not work at anything that he did not believe useful. So then the reporter asked him what was his most "useful" invention, and this was his answer:

"I don't know. It depends upon the point of view. I suppose the electric lighting system was the most useful."

Asked his formula for happiness he succinctly replied: "Work." and asked his formula for success he reiterated, "work." Asked how much of a day a man should devote to work and how much to play, he replied that "you can't give any rule because men, like plants, have such a variety of characteristics."

"How much of his brain does the average man use?" he was asked.

"Scarcely any," Edison replied. "The capacity of the human brain is tremendous. The brain of man is lying idle, for the most part. It is being hardly used at all."

"Have people learned how to take care of themselves—how to live?"

"No, they are just commencing to suspect how to live," said Edison, a smile playing around his eyes.

Asked if he thought human beings existed on other planets, he answered that he did not know, saying: "I keep myself confined pretty close to earth."

"Very greatly, enormously," he said when asked to what extent he thought a good wife contributed to the success of her husband in life.

"At what age approximately, should a young man marry?"

"Around twenty-one," replied Edison.

"Should all boys strive for a college education?"

"Colleges are changing," said Edison. "They are throwing off the old methods that did not produce well. There is more reality being introduced into the colleges steadily. More technical schools are coming into being. They are getting down to realities and they see the need of a technical education for young men. This is the age of machines."

Edison's attention was called to the advice of a Massachusetts professor who advised students to "be a snob and marry the boss' daughter." Edison's comment was: "Simply wind; academic, as they call it."

He declared that his idea of a college is the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He pointed out we are "a machine nation and we want engineers." He said when the M. I. T. turns out students into the world they "know what to do and how to do it."

"What one thing in your life gave you the greatest thrill?" Edison was asked.

"Quite seriously I replied: 'I cannot say that I ever had what you call a thrill. By the very nature of my life's work I had to expect to be continually disappointed but to keep on reaching for the solution of the problem. Then when the problem was solved I would go into something else. An inventor has theories. He tries them out, experiments with this, that and the other thing. Some things work. Others do not. We cannot see ahead; that is we have to keep experimenting, improving on things as we go along.'"

And Edison, still experimenting on ways to benefit mankind, turned to his work bench.

(Editor's Note: In the third and concluding article of this series, Mr. Edison will discuss economic conditions in the United States and give his views as to the future.)

WILL GET HEARING

Ben Vest, Dayton Pike, is at liberty under $500 bond pending a hearing assigned for 10 a. m. February 25, in Probate Court on a charge of possessing liquor. Vest pleaded not guilty when arraigned. He was arrested by a state prohibition inspector of Dayton, who reported to authorities that he confiscated several gallons of liquor found in Vest's possession.

FUGITIVE CAUGHT;
TO SERVE SENTENCE

Floyd Rumer, Bath Twp., apprehended recently as a fugitive from justice, was removed Friday, in the custody of Deputy Sheriff George Sugden to the Cincinnati Workhouse to serve out a fine of $200 and costs, imposed December 6 on a charge of possessing liquor. His conviction was affirmed by Common Pleas Court and his bond of $500 was declared forfeit by Probate Judge S. C. Wright when authorities could not find him.

Recently Judge Wright learned that Rumer was located in Pennsylvania and had been brought back to Osborn to face prosecution on a non-support charge. As a result the court ordered him committed to the Cincinnati Workhouse to work out the assessment in the liquor case.
